

Have you ever considered becoming a vegetarian? Or maybe you choose to be one. My family and I are vegetarians because meat and milk are hard to afford. Both of my parents passed away in a civil war so I live with my grandparents, aunt, uncle, and two cousins. We live on the mountainous side of Nepal in the second story of our corn store. My family owns that corn store and earns all of our money off of it. It's not much, but it's enough to survive. Most of the time, its hard living there because it's a 2 hour hike to the nearest road!

My family and I live on one plot of land where we grow wheat mash, lentils, and vegetables. That is mostly all of the food we eat other than corn. We sleep together in that one room on the floor. The ground floor is stable for goats and buffalo to roam around! We do have some electricity but it is powered by a car battery, which gives me some light to study!

Every day, I study hard at school so I can get good grades. I also study at home because I would love to become some kind of doctor in the future. The only problem is, to be a doctor you have to go through years of learning in college and my family might not have enough money to pay my tuition.

In my free time, I play fighting games and throw a ball around with my friend. There is so much space to play up in the mountains! And plus there is a great view. Even though my lifestyle isn't the best, I enjoy every moment I have and I love the life I have.
